SECURITY (S)HERO

Authors: Kristin Pirovica & Deborah Fisher

Leadership happens at every level, and it's really a mindset someone puts into play. Knowing which leadership traits are needed in the game at specific times empowers to be in action at all times.

Kristin Pirovica

Executive Director Security Programs & Compliance - National Security Agency

A great deal of the security environment has been transformed by the technological revolution. The most significant change is the shift from a traditional security model to a more dynamic and agile one. This shift has led to a new paradigm of security, one that is more focused on the protection of information and the integrity of systems. This new paradigm is more complex and more demanding than ever before. It requires a new set of skills and a new set of mindsets. It requires a new set of leadership traits. It requires a new set of heroes.

WIHS Highlight

For this inaugural WIHS quarterly publication, National Security Services is celebrating women in the security team by featuring some stories from the field highlighting the actions and accomplishments of the security (S)heroes that help build an operation sustained in empathy and unwavering care. Check out their stories in this featured article from the Women in Healthcare Security community, where empowerment, diversity, and belonging come together for a more equitable workforce.

Mentoring Moment: Tips on Navigating Career Advancement in Male-Dominated Fields

Confidence and competence are key. Believe in yourself and your abilities, and continuously strive to improve your skills and knowledge. Be assertive and speak up, while also actively listening and learning from others. Build a support network. Seek out mentors, allies, and other women in your industry who can provide guidance, support, and valuable insights. Surround yourself with a strong support system that can help you navigate challenges and stay motivated. Embrace your unique perspective. Recognize the value of your diverse experiences and ideas. Use them to your advantage by contributing with innovative solutions and approaches that can benefit your team and your organization. Stay resilient. In a male-dominated environment, setbacks and biases may occur. Maintain a resilient mindset, learn from adversity, and keep pushing forward. Your perseverance can pave the way for meaningful change. Remember, you have the potential to make a significant impact in any industry, regardless of its male-dominated nature. Stay true to yourself, be proactive, and continue to strive for success.

Shining STARS

Sheraile Wright,
AUS Healthcare
Security Officer,
Fontana Medical Center, SCAL –
Life Saving Award

Officer Wright noted that an infant patient was cyanotic and in respiratory distress. Officer Wright alerted a nurse to examine the baby and emergency medical treatment was provided. The patient's life was saved.

Ally Corner

One of the most impactful ways to be a good ally to your colleagues from minority groups is to be an advocate for them – create space, speak up when inappropriate behavior is observed, and treat everyone equally, just to name a few. We'd love to highlight examples from our department! Share via email at wihs@kp.org.
